

October news

We cannot remember a year where we have experienced more mixed weather than 2011. I wonder what is in store for us for the coming season! We survived the first drought back in March/April when we wondered whether our veggie transplants would survive the scorching heatwave and we would have enough grass for silage. As it turns out we have been amazed that all our veggie plants have survived and we have a wonderful selection of greens, kales and root veggies for the coming season. Our cereal crops yielded better than our expectations and we are fast becoming the largest supplier of organic red clover seed in the U.K.

With Halloween approaching, we will be putting a pumpkin in each box being delivered week commencing 24th October.
